After hearing of the various forms of Dharma, Bhavāni, Mother of the worlds, Destructress of all worldly bonds, spoke again to Śaṅkara (1).

Śrī Devī said:

I have heard of the different Dharmas which bring happiness in this world and the next, and bestow piety, wealth, fulfillment of desire, ward off danger, and are the cause of the realisation of oneness with the Supreme (2). I wish now to hear of the castes (4) and of the stages of life. (5) Speak in Thy kindness, O Omnipresent One! of these, and of the mode of life which should be observed therein (3).

Śrī Sadāśīva said:

O Thou of auspicious Vows! in the Satya and other Ages there were four castes; in each of these were four stages of life; and the rules of conduct varied according to the caste and stages of life. (5) In the Kali Age, however, there are five castes—namely, Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya, Śūdra, Sāmānya. (6) Each of these five castes, O Great Queen! (7) is not based on any essential difference, but is a hybrid from the others.

two stages of life.\(^1\) Listen then, O Ādyā! whilst I narrate to Thee their mode of life, rites, and duties \(^2\) (4-6). I have already spoken to Thee of the ways of men born in the Kali Age. Unused as they are to penance,\(^3\) and devoid of learning in the Vedas, incapable of doing the rites, short-lived, and incapable of strenuous effort,\(^4\) how can they endure bodily labour? (7).

O Beloved! there is in the Kali Age no Brahmacārya \(^5\) nor Vāna-prastha,\(^5\) There are two stages only, those of Grha-stha and Bhiksuka \(^6\) (8). O Auspicious One! in the Kali Age the householder \(^7\) should in all his acts be guided by the rules of the Āgamas.\(^8\) He will never attain success \(^9\) by other ways \(^10\) (9). And, O Devi! at the stage of the mendicant \(^11\) there is no carrying of the staff as enjoined in the Veda, since, O Thou Who knowest the Truth! \(^12\) that is a practice which is Vedic \(^13\) (10). O Gentle One! the adoption of the life of an Avadhūta,\(^1\) according to the Śaiva rites,\(^2\) is in the Kali Age equivalent to the entry into the life of a Samnyāsin \(^3\) (11). When the Kali Age is in full sway, the Vipras \(^4\) and the other castes have equal right to enter into both these stages of life (12). The purificatory rites of all are to be according to the rules ordained by Śiva, though the particular practices of the Vipras and other castes vary (13).

A man becomes a householder the moment he is born. It is by Saṁskāra,\(^5\) that he enters upon the other stage of life.\(^6\) For this reason, O Great Queen! \(^7\) one should first be a householder, following the rules of that mode of life (14). When, however, the Brahman is known and one is freed of

The Tantra thus further emphasizes the degeneracy of the Kali Age, since even in those two stages (Āśrama) which are prescribed during its continuance, there is a dispensation from rites which the men of that Age are incapable of observing. The Saṁnyāsa Āśrama is in vogue in the Kali Age but the carrying of the staff (Danda-dhāraṇa) is not permitted, as the rites attending investiture with the Danda are Vedic. Some however do carry the Danda.

1 Literally, shaken off, cast aside, washed off, one who has separated from the world. An Avadhūta has been thus defined:

Yo vilāyāśramān vargān-ātmanyeva sthitāḥ puṁān,

“\emph{A man who is above both caste and stage of life (āśrama), and ever contemplating the Supreme Soul only, he is called Avadhūta.}” The Brāhmaṇa must study, teach, give and take alms, worship and perform worship for others. The Avadhūta, if a Brāhmaṇa, however, does not follow these injunctions, or, if he is a Kṣatriya or Vaśya, the duties laid down for these castes (see \textit{Sakti and Śākta}).

worldly desires, it is then that one should abandon all and seek refuge in the life of an ascetic (15). In childhood one should acquire knowledge; in youth, wealth and wife. The wise man in middle age will devote himself to acts of charity and piety, and in his old age he should retire from the world (16).

No one should retire from the world who has an old father or mother, a devoted and chaste wife, or young and helpless children (17). He who becomes an ascetic leaving mothers, fathers, infant children, wives, agnates and cognates, is guilty of a great sin (18). He who becomes a mendicant without first satisfying the need of his own parents and relatives is guilty of the sins of killing his father and mother, a woman, and a Brahmāna (19). The Brāhmaṇas and men of other castes should perform their respective purificatory rites according to the ordinances laid down by Śiva. This is the rule in the Kali Age (20).

Śrī Devī said:
O Omniscient One! tell Me what is the rule of life for the householder and mendicant, and what are the purificatory rites for the Vipras and other castes (21).

Śrī Sadāśiva said:
The state of an householder is for all the descendants of Manu the first duty. I shall, therefore, first speak of it and do Thou listen to Me, O Lady of the Kaules (22). A householder should be devoted to the Brahman and have his mind turned towards the knowledge of Brahman, and should dedicate whatever he does to Brahman (23). He should not tell an untruth, or practise deceit, and should ever be engaged in the worship of the Devatās and guests (24). Regarding his father and mother as two visible incarnate deities, he should ever and by every means in his power serve them (25). O Śiva! O Pārvatī! if the mother and father are pleased, Thou too art pleased, and the Supreme Being is propitious to him (26). O Primal One! Thou art the Mother of the Worlds, and the supreme Brahman is the Father; what better religious act can there be than that which pleases You both? (27).

food to mother and father. They should always be spoken to in a gentle voice, and their children’s demeanour should ever be agreeable to them. The good son who ever obeys the behests of his mother and father hallows the family (28-29). If one desires one’s own welfare, all arrogance, mockery, threats and angry words should be avoided in the parents’ presence (30). The son should remain obedient to his parents and should, on seeing them bow to them and out of reverence to them, stand up in their presence, and should not take his seat without their permission (31). He who, intoxicated with the pride of learning or wealth, slights his parents, is beyond the pale of all Dharma, and goes to a terrible Hell (32). Even if the vital breath were to reach his throat, the householder should not eat without first feeding his mother, father, son, wife, guest, and brother (33). The man who, to the deprivation of his elders and equals, fills his own belly is despised in this world, and goes to Hell in the next (34). The householder should cherish his wife, educate his children, and support his kinsmen and friends. This is the eternal duty (35). The body is nourished by the mother. It originates from the father. The kinsmen, out of love, teach. The man, therefore, who forsakes them is indeed vile (36). For their sake should an hundred pains be undergone. With all one’s ability they should be pleased. This is the eternal duty (37). That man who in this world turns his mind to Brahman and adheres faithfully to the Truth in his conduct is above all a man of good deeds, and knows the Supreme, and is blest in all the worlds (38). The householder should never punish his wife, but should cherish her like a mother. If she is virtuous and devoted to her husband, he should never forsake her even in times of greatest misfortune (39). The wise man, whilst his own wife is living, should never with wicked intent touch another woman, otherwise he will go to hell (40). The wise man should not, when in a private place, live and sleep or lie down close to another man’s wife. He should avoid all improper speech and braggart boldness in her presence (41). By riches, clothes, love, respect and pleasing words should one’s wife be pleased. The husband should never do anything displeasing to her (42). The wise man should not send his wife to any festival, concourse of people, pilgrimage or to another’s house, except she be attended by his son or an inmate of his own house (43).

O Maheśvari! that man whose wife is both faithful and happy is surely looked upon as if he had performed all Dharma, and is truly Thy favourite also (44). A father should fondle and nurture his sons until their fourth year, and then until their sixteenth they should be taught learning and their duties (45). Up to their twentieth year they should be kept engaged in household duties, and thenceforward, considering them as equals, he should ever show affection towards them (46). In the same manner a daughter should be cherished and taught with great care, and then given away with money and jewels to a good husband (47).

The householder should in the same way also cherish and protect his brothers and sisters and their children, his kinsmen, friends, and servants (48). He should also maintain his fellow-worshippers, fellow-villagers, guests and unexpected strangers (49). If the wealthy householder does not so act, then let him be known as a beast, a sinner, and one despised in the worlds (50). The householder should not be inordinately addicted to sleep, idling, care for the body, dressing his hair, eating or drinking, or attention to his clothes (51). He should be moderate as to food, sleep, speech, and sexual intercourse, and be sincere, humble, pure, free from sloth, and persevering (52). Chivalrous to his foes, modest before his friends, relatives, and elders, he should neither respect those who deserve censure nor slight those who are worthy of respect (53). Men should only be admitted to his trust and confidence after association with them and observation of their nature, inclination, conduct, and friendly character (54). Even an insignificant enemy should be feared, and one’s own power should be disclosed only at the proper time. But on no account should one deviate from the path of duty (55). He who knows Dharma should not speak of his own fame and prowess, of what has been told him in secret, nor of the good that he has done for others (56). A man of good name should not engage in any quarrel with an unworthy motive, nor when defeat is certain, nor with one who is either superior or inferior to himself (57). He should diligently earn knowledge, wealth, fame, and religious merit, and avoid all vicious habits, the company of the wicked, falsehood, and treachery (58). Ventures should be undertaken according to the circumstances and one’s condition in life, and actions should be done according to their season. Therefore, in everything that a man does he should first consider whether the circumstances and time are suitable (59). The householder should employ himself in the acquisition of what is necessary and in the protection of the same. He should be judicious, pious, good to his friends. He should be moderate in speech and laughter, in particular in the presence of those entitled to his reverence (60). He should hold his senses under control, be of cheerful disposition, think

The last-mentioned meaning is applicable here. There are various kinds, such as excessive addiction to women, intoxicating drinks, gambling, hunting, etc. (see Kāmandakīya-Nītīśāra, Chapter XI, verse 12). The term is a comprehensive one, and is sometimes used generally for all defects—sleeping in the day, over-addiction to dancing and singing, etc.

That man who is the happiness of his mother and father, to whom his friends are devoted, and whose fame is sung by men, he is the conqueror of the three worlds (64). He who has taken the vow of truth, whose charity is ever for the poor, who has mastered lust and anger,⁵ by him are the three worlds conquered (65). ¹ Which Bhārati explains as meaning “keep his thoughts fixed on the Sāstras,” etc.

² The senses are the doors through which the mind perceives the outer world. It should be cautious as to the objects with which it brings itself in contact, and not expose itself to temptation. Bhārati says, Mātrā = Indriyavrūti and Sparsā is the relationship of the senses to external objects.

³ So it is said: Satyam brūyat priyam brūyat na brūyat satyaṃ-apriyam (Say what is true and pleasant, but not what is unpleasant even if true); also, Hitam manohāri ca durlabham vacaḥ (Kīrtārjunīya of Bhāravi)—i.e., Rare is the word both salutary and pleasing.

is devoted to and a faithful follower of the ordinances of Śiva, and remains under My control, by him the three worlds are conquered (68). The Knower ¹ who looks upon all alike and acts merely for the guidance of his fellows, has conquered the three worlds (69).

O Devi! purity is of two kinds, external and internal. The dedication of oneself to Brahmān is known as internal purity (70) and the cleansing of the impurities of the body by water or ashes, or any other matter which cleanses the body, is called external purity (71). O Dearest One! the waters of Gaṅgā, or of any other river, lake, pond, well, or pool, or of the celestial River, are equally purifying ² (72). O Thou of auspicious Vows! the ashes from a place of sacrifice and cleansed earth are excellent, and the skin of an antelope, a clean cloth and grass are as purifying as earth (73). O Auspicious One! ³ what need is there to say more about the rules of purity and impurity? Whatever ⁴ purifies the mind that the householder should do (74). Let there be external purification upon awakening from sleep, after sexual intercourse, making water, voiding the bowels, and at the close of a meal, and whenever dirt of any kind has been touched (75).

so does the ritual\(^1\) (76). The Sādhakas of the Brahma Mantra have performed their Samādhyā when they have made Japa of the Gāyatri realizing within themselves the identity of the Gāyatri and Brahman (77).\(^2\) In the case of those who are not Brahma-worshippers, Vaidika Samādhyā consists of the recitation of the Gāyatri after offering of oblations to the Sun \(^3\) (78).

O Gentle One! in all daily prayers \(^4\) Japa should be done one thousand and eight, or a hundred and eight, or ten times (79). O Devi! the Śūdras and Sāmānyas \(^5\) may observe any of the rites proclaimed by the Āgamas, and by these they attain that which they desire (80). The three times (of performance of Samādhyā) are at sunrise, at noon, and at sunset (81).

Śrī Devī said:
Thou hast Thyself said, O Lord! that when the Kali Age is in full sway then for all castes, commencing with the Vipras, Tāntrika rites are alone appropriate. Why, then, dost Thou enjoin on the Vipras \(^6\) the Vedic rites? It behoveth Thee to explain this fully to Me (82-83).

\(^6\) Brāhmaṇas.

Brahma-Sāvitrī\(^1\) is as much Vaidika, as Tāntrika, and is appropriate in both Vaidika and Tāntrika rites (85). It is, therefore, O Devi! that I have said that when the Kali Age is in full sway, the twice-born shall alone be entitled to the Gāyatri, but not the other Mantras \(^2\) (86). In the Kali Age the Sāvitrī \(^3\) should be said by the Brāhmaṇas, preceded by the Tāra, \(^4\) and by the Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas, preceded by the Kamalā \(^5\) and Vāghavā \(^6\)-Bijas respectively (87). In order, O Supreme Devi! that a distinction may be drawn between the twice-born and the Śūdras, the daily duties \(^7\) are directed to be preceded by Vaidika-Samādhyā \(^8\) (88). Success, however, may also be attained by the mere following of the ordinances of Śambhu. \(^9\) This is verily true, and I repeat it is true and very true, and there is no doubt about it (89). O Adored of the Devas! even if the stated time for the doing of the daily Samādhyā is past, all, who desire Emancipation but are otherwise prevented, should do it by saying, “Om That Everlasting Brahman” \(^10\) (90). The seat, clothes, vessels, bed, carriages, residence, and household furniture of the worshipper should be as clean as possible (91). At the close of the daily prayers the householder should keep himself occupied with household duties or the study of the Vedas; he should never remain idle (92). In holy places, on holy days, or when the Sun or Moon is in eclipse, he should do inward recitation, and give alms, and thus become the abode of all that is good (93).

In the Kali Age, life is dependent on the food that is eaten; fasting is therefore not recommended; in lieu of it, the giving of alms is ordained (94). O Great Queen! in the Kali Age, alms are efficacious in the accomplishment of all things. The proper objects of such alms are the poor devoted to meritorious acts (95). O Mother! the first days of the month, of the year, of the lunar half-months, the fourteenth day of the lunar half-month, the eighth day of the light half of the lunar month, the eleventh day of the lunar half-month, the new moon, one's birthday, the anniversary of one's father's death, and days fixed as those of festivals, are holy days (96-97).

The River Gaṅgā and all the great Rivers, the house of the religious Teacher, and the places of the Devas are holy places. But for those who, neglecting the study of the Vedas, the service of mother and father, and the protection of their wife, go to places of pilgrimage, such holy places are changed to Hell (98-99). For women there is no necessity to go on pilgrimage, to fast, or to do other like acts, nor is there any need to perform any devotion except that which consists in the service of their husband (100). For a woman her husband is the place of pilgrimage, the performance of penance, the giving of alms, the carrying out of vows, and her spiritual teacher. Therefore should a woman devote herself to the service of her husband with her whole Self (101). She should ever by words and deeds of devotion act for the pleasure of her husband, and, remaining faithful to his behests, should please his kinsmen and relations (102).

A woman whose husband is her vow, should not look at him with hard eyes, or utter harsh words before him. Not even in her thought should she do anything which is displeasing to her husband (103). She who by body, mind, and word, and by pleasant acts, ever pleases her husband, attains to the abode of Brahmā (104). Remaining ever faithful to the wishes of her husband, she should not look upon the face of other men, or have converse with them, or uncover her body before them (105). In childhood she should remain under the control of her parents, in her youth of her husband, and in her old age of the relatives of her husband. She should never be independent \(^1\) (106). A father should not marry his daughter if she does not know her duty to a husband and how to serve him, as also the other rules \(^2\) of woman's conduct (107). Neither the flesh of human beings, nor of the animals resembling them,\(^3\) nor the flesh of the cow, which is serviceable in various ways, nor the flesh of carnivorous animals, nor such meat as is tasteless, should be eaten (108). O Auspicious One! \(^4\) fruits and roots of various kinds, whether grown in villages or jungles, and all that is grown in the ground, may be eaten at pleasure (109).

Teaching and the performance of sacrifices are the proper duties of a Brähmana. But if he be incapable of these, he may earn his livelihood by following the profession of a Kṣatriya or Vaiśya (110). The proper occupation of a Rājanya \(^5\) is that of fighting and ruling. But if he be incapable of these, he may earn his livelihood by following the profession of a Vaiśya or Śūdra (111). If a Vaiśya cannot trade, then for him the following of the profession of a Śūdra involves no blame. For a Śūdra, O Sovereign Queen! \(^6\) service is the prescribed means of livelihood (112). O Devi! members of the Sāmānya \(^7\) class may for their maintenance follow all occupations except such as are specially reserved for the Brähmana (113). The latter, void of hate and attachment,\(^8\) self-controlled, truthful, the conqueror of his senses, free of envy and all guile, should pursue his own avocations (114). He should ever be the same to, and the well-wisher of, all men, and teach his well-behaved pupils as if they were his own sons (115). He should ever avoid falsehood, detraction, and vicious habits,\(^1\) arrogance, friendship for low persons, the pursuit of low objects, and the use of language which gives offence (116). Where peace is possible, avoid war.\(^2\) Peace with honour is excellent. O Beauteous One! \(^3\) for the Rājanya it should be either death or victory in battle \(^4\) (117). A man of the kingly caste should not covet the wealth of his subjects, or levy excessive taxes, but, being faithful to his promises, he should ever in the observance of his duty \(^5\) protect his subjects as though they were his own children (118). In administration, war, treaties, and other affairs of State the King should take the advice of his Ministers (119). War should be carried on in accordance with Dharma.\(^6\) Rewards and punishments should be awarded justly and in accordance with the Śāstras. The best treaty should be concluded which his power allows (120). By stratagem \(^1\) should the end desired be attained. By the same means should wars be conducted and treaties concluded. Victory, peace, and prosperity follow stratagem (121). He should ever avoid the company of the low, and be good to the learned. He should be of a calm disposition, judicious of action in time of trouble, of good conduct, and reasonable in his expenditure (122).

He should be an expert in the maintenance of his forts, well trained in the use of arms. He should ever ascertain the disposition of his army, and teach his soldiers military tactics (123). O Devi! he should not in battle kill one who is stunned, who has surrendered his arms, or is a fugitive, nor those of his enemies whom he has captured, nor their wives or children (124). Whatever is acquired either by victory or treaty should be distributed amongst the soldiers in shares according to merit (125).

The King should make known to himself the character and courage of each of his warriors, and if he would care for his interests he should not place a large army under the command of a single officer (126). He should not put his trust in any single person, nor place one man in charge of the administration, nor treat his inferiors as equals, nor be familiar with them \(^2\) (127). He should be very learned, yet not garrulous; full of knowledge, yet anxious to learn; full of honours, yet without arrogance. In awarding both reward and punishment he should be calm and discriminating (128). The King should either himself or through his spies watch his subjects, kinsmen, and servants (129). A wise master should not either reward or punish anyone in a fit of passion or arrogance and without due cause (130). Soldiers, commanders, ministers, wife, children and servitors he should protect. If guilty, they should be punished according to their deserts (131). The King should protect, like a father, the insane, the helpless, children and orphans,\(^1\) and those who are old and infirm \(^2\) (132).

Know that agriculture and trade are the appropriate callings of the Vaiśya. It is by agriculture and trade that man's body is maintained (133). Therefore, O Devi! in agriculture and trade all negligence, vicious habits,\(^3\) laziness, untruth, and deceit should be avoided in every way (134).

Śivā! when both buyer and seller are agreed as to the object of sale and the price thereof, and mutual promises have been made, then the purchase becomes complete (135). O Dearest One! the sale or gift of property by one who is a lunatic, out of his senses,\(^4\) under age, a captive, or enfeebled by disease, is invalid (136). The purchase of things not seen is concluded by hearing the description thereof. If the article be found to differ from its description, then the purchase is of no effect (137). The sale of an elephant, a camel, and a horse is effected by the description of the animal. The sale is, however, set aside if the animal does not answer its description (138). If in the purchase of elephants, camels, and horses a latent vice becomes patent within the course of a year from the date of sale, then the purchase is set aside, but not after the lapse of one year (139). O Devi of Kula! the human body is the receptacle of piety, wealth, desires, and final Liberation. It should therefore never be the subject of purchase; and such a purchase is by reason of My commands invalid (140).

O Dear One! in the borrowing of barley, wheat, or paddy, the profit of the lender at the end of the year is laid down to be fourth of the quantity lent, and in the case of the loan of metals one-eighth (141). In monetary transactions, agriculture, trade, and in all other transactions, men should ever carry out their undertakings. This is approved by the laws (142).

A servant should be skillful, clean, truthful, wakeful, careful and alert, and possess his senses under control (143). He should, as he desires happiness in this and the next world, regard his master as if he were Viṣṇu Himself, his master's wife as his own mother, and respect his master's kinsmen and friends (144). He should know his master's friends to be his friends, and his master's enemies to be his enemies, and should ever remain in respectful attendance upon his master, awaiting his orders (145). He should carefully conceal his master's honour, the family dissensions, anything said in private or which would hurt the mind of his master (146). He should not covet the wealth of his master, but remain ever devoted to his good. He should not make use of bad words or laugh or play in his master's presence (147). He should not, with lustful mind, even look at the maidservants in his master's house, or lie down with them, or play with them in secret (148). If guilty, he should beg the forgiveness of his master. He should not be forward, impertinent, or attempt to place himself on an equal footing with his master (150).

Except when in the Bhairavi-cakra or Tattva-cakra, persons of all castes should marry in their caste according to the Brāhmaṇa form, and should eat with their own caste people (151). O Great Queen! in these two circles, however, marriage in the Śaiva form is ordained, and as regards eating and drinking, no caste distinctions exist (152).

Śrī Devī said:

What is the Bhairavi-cakra, and what is the Tattva-cakra? I desire to hear about them, and it behoves Thee kindly to speak of them (153).

Śrī Sādāśiva said:

O Devī! in the ordinances relating to Kula worship I have spoken of the formation of Circles. That should be done by the excellent worshippers at times of special worship (154). O Dear One! there is no strict rule relating to the Bhairavi-cakra. This auspicious Circle may at any convenient time be formed (155). I will now speak of the rites relating to this Circle, which benefits the worshippers, and in which, if the Devī be worshipped, She speedily grants the prayers of Her votaries (156).

In the Tantraśastra it is said that in Śaiva marriage a Brāhmaṇa can marry a woman of all the classes, a Kṣatriya can marry all classes except a Brāhmaṇa, a Vaiśya all classes except Brāhmaṇa and Kṣatriya, a Śūdra may marry a Śūdra or Śāmāya, a Śāmāya may marry a Śāmāya alone (ed. Bhakti, p. 338).

Astra\textsuperscript{1}-Bijas, should seat himself upon it (157). Then the wise one should draw a square with a triangle in it with either vermillion or red sandal-wood paste, or simply water (158). Then, taking a painted jar, and smearing it with curd and sun-dried rice, and placing a vermillion mark on it, let him put a bunch of leaves and fruit upon it\textsuperscript{2} (159). Filling it with perfumed water whilst uttering the Pranava,\textsuperscript{3} the worshipper should place it on the Man\textit{ṣ}al\textit{a},\textsuperscript{4} and exhibit before it lights and incense-sticks (160). The jar should then be worshipped with scent and flowers. The I\textit{ṣ}ṭa-devat\textit{ā}\textsuperscript{5} should be meditated upon as being in the jar. The ritual according to the shortened form should then be done (of the I\textit{ṣ}ṭa-devat\textit{ā}) (161). Listen, O Adored of the Immortals! whilst I speak to Thee of the peculiar features of this worship. There is no necessity of placing the nine cup for the Guru and others (162). The Sādhaka should then take such of the elements of worship as he wishes,\textsuperscript{6} and place them in front of himself. Then, purifying them with the Weapon Mantra,\textsuperscript{7} let him gaze upon them with steadfast eyes\textsuperscript{8} (163).

Then, placing scent and flowers in the wine-jar, let him meditate upon the Ānanda-Bhairavi and Ānanda-Bhairava in it (164).

\textsuperscript{1} i.e., "Phat."

\textsuperscript{2} Usually a mango twig with leaves and a cocoa-nut is placed on the mouth of the jar. The water is perfumed with camphor and the like.

\textsuperscript{3} Om. The first word: from Pra=before, Nu=to speak.

\textsuperscript{4} i.e., the square and triangle referred to in verse 158, which is ordinarily perfumed with camphor.

\textsuperscript{6} i.e., such Tattvas as one prefers if all cannot be had, but there should be the first (Wine) and one of the Suddhis.

\textsuperscript{8} Divya-dr\textit{ṣ}t\textit{i}.
The Kula worshipper should sanctify the wine by repeating over it the Pāsādi-trika-Bija and Svāhā¹ a hundred and eight times (170). When the Kali Age is in full sway, in the case of the householder whose mind is entirely engrossed with domestic desires, the three sweets should be substituted in the place of the first element of worship (wine) (171). Milk, sugar, and honey are the three sweets.² They should be deemed to be the image of wine, and as such offered to the Deity (172). Those born in the Kali Age are by their nature weak in intellect, and their minds are distracted by lust. By reason of this, they do not recognize the Śakti to be the image of the Deity ³ (173). Therefore, O Pārvati! for such as these let there be, in place of the last element of worship (sexual union), meditation upon the Lotus-feet of the Devī and the inward recitation of their ⁴ Iṣṭa-mantra ⁵ (174).

Therefore such of the elements of worship as have been obtained should be consecrated by the recitation, over each of them, of the same Mantra one hundred times (175). Let the worshipper, with closed eyes, meditate upon them as suffused by Brahman,¹ then offer them as before to Kāli, and, lastly, eat and drink the consecrated elements (176). O Gentle One!² this is the Bhairavi-cakra, which is not revealed in the other Tantras. I have, however, spoken before Thee of it. It is the essence of essences, and more excellent than the best (177).

Pārvati! in Bhairavi-cakra and Tattva-cakra the excellent worshipper should be wedded to his Śakti, according to the laws prescribed by Śiva ³ (178).

Two forms of marriage are, Brāhma (the usual kind) and Śaiva. There is in the first no restriction as regards age or caste. A widow can also so marry. The only restriction is that the woman has not already a husband (ix, 279). The latter marriage is of two kinds, one terminated by the Čakra and the other life-long (ix, 269 and in verse 280). The persons so married are Śaktis. A Śakti again may be Pujā or Bhogā. The latter may be enjoyed and not the former who merely acts as Uttara-śādhikā, that is, assists in the ritual the man whose Śakti she is. A Pujā-Śakti is never for life. The Bhogā-Śakti may be for life or for the Čakra only. In all cases some form marriage precedes intercourse where it takes place. On verse 174 Tarkālaṁkāra says that the Brāhma wife is called Śva-śakti or Apara-śakti (that is not Para-śakti). The Śaiva wife is called Para-śakti. The Brāhma wife, if purified by Śaiva marriage ritual or taken as a Śakti in the Bhairavi-cakra, becomes a Para-śakti. Para-śakti should (he says) be treated as the Śādhaka’s mother and as Divinity (Iṣṭadevatā). If the thought of wife relationship (Bharya-bhava) arises in the mind there is a fall. Here (he says) Śiva has prohibited the last Tattva ere long for men of ordinary intelligence and weak control over their desire (Kama). Such are not competent to take a Śakti. This is not clear. But presumably what is meant is that they are not in a position to do Śādhana with a Śakti. For such a man the presence of a woman is rather an obstacle—Vighna—than a help). Those, however, who by Śādhana have conquered lust, may do Śādhana with Śakti. The Uttara and other Tantras say that after doing Śādhana with Śiva-śakti and obtaining success (Siddhi) then when the mind is free of temptation, Śādhana may be done with Para-śakti. Gupta-śādhana Tantra says that “in Kulācāra the Siddhamantrin should worship (Pra-pūjayet) the Kula women.”

Vira 1 who without marriage worships by enjoyment of Śakti 2 is, without doubt, guilty of the sin of going with another man's wife 3 (179). When seated in the Bhairavi-cakra men of all castes composing it are like the best of the twice-born; but when the circle is broken, they revert again to their own respective castes (180). In this Circle there is no distinction of caste nor impurity of food. 4 The Vira worshippers in the Circle are My image; there is no doubt of that (181). In the formation of this Circle there is no rule as to time or place or question as to fitness. 5 The necessary articles may be used by whomsoever they may have been brought (182). Food brought from a long distance, whether it be cooked or uncooked, 6 whether brought by a Vira 7 or a Pasu, 8 becomes pure, immediately it is brought within the Cakra (183).

While the Cakra is being formed, all dangers flee in confusion, awed by the Brahmānīk 9 lustre of its Viras (184).

8 See ibid. Cooked food should not be touched by a lower caste; if so, it becomes impure. But the rule does not apply to uncooked food.

9 See Śakti and Śākta.

10 See Śakti and Śākta. The word Brahmānīk is here to be understood in its primary meaning, "Brahma jñāṇī sa Brahmānāḥ"—i.e., he who knows the Brahma is a Brahmān, and not as signifying the Brahmān caste.

Upon the mere hearing that a Bhairavi circle has been formed at any place, fierce Piśācas, Guhyakas, Yaksas, and Vetālas 1 depart afar in fear (185). Into the circle come all the holy places, 2 the great and holy places, 3 and with reverence Indra 4 and all the immortals (186). Śiva! the place where a circle is formed is a great and holy place, more sacred than each and all the other holy places. Even the Thirty-three 5 desire the excellent offerings 6 made to Thee in this circle (187). Whatever the food be, whether cooked or uncooked, and whether brought by a Mleccha, 7 Cauḍāla, 8 Kirāta, 9 or Hūna, 10 it becomes pure as soon as it is placed in the hand of a Vira 11 (188). By the seeing of the circle and of the worshippers therein, who are but images of Myself, men infected with the taint of the Kali Age are liberated from the bonds of the life of a Pasu 12 (189). When, however, the Kali Age is in full sway, the circle should not be concealed. The Vira should at all places and at all times practise Kula 13 rites and make Kula worship (190).

13 Tāntrika rites of the Kaula form.
In the Circle all distinction of caste, frivolous talk, levity, garrulity, spitting, and breaking wind should be avoided (191). Such as are cruel, mischievous, Paśu, sinful, atheists, blasphemers of Kula doctrine, and calumniators of the Kula Scriptures, should be kept far away from the Circle (192). Even the Vīra who, induced by affection, fear, or attachment, admits a Paśu into the circle falls from his Kula duty, and goes to hell (193). All who have sought refuge in the Kula-Dharma, whether Bṛāhmanas, Kṣatriyas, Vaiśyas, Śūdras, or Śāmānyas, should ever be worshipped like Devas (194). He who, whilst in the Circle, makes, from pride in supremacy of his caste, distinctions of caste, descends to a terrible hell even though he should have gone to the very end of the Vedānta (195). How within the Circle can there be any fear of sin for Kaulas, who are good and pure of heart, and who are manifestly the very image of Śiva? (196). Vipras and others who are followers of Śiva should, so long as they are within the circle, follow the ordinance of Śiva and the observances prescribed by Him (197).

2 See p. 233 note 13, ante.
3 Tāntrika of the Vīra class. The Vīra is a man of strong impulses and passions. In him the Rajoguna is dominant. Tāntrik Śādhana is mainly aimed at using these impulses and passions in such a way that they help the man in the upward path.

Without the Circle each should follow his own calling according to his caste and stage of life, and should discharge his respective duty for the ordered continuance of the world (198). One Japa made by a devout man, when seated within the circle, bears the fruit attainable by the performance of a hundred Purāscāraṇa and by Śāvāsana, Muṇḍāsana, and Cītāsana (199). Who can describe the glory of the Bhairavi-cakra? Its formation, though but once only frees of all sins (200). The man who for six months worships in such a circle will become a King, he who so worships for a year becomes the Conqueror of Death, and by the daily performance of such worship he attains to Nirvāṇa (201).

What is the need, O Kālikā! of saying more? Know this for certain, that for the attainment of happiness in this or the next world there is only the Kula-dharma, and no other (202). When the Kali Age is dominant and men are devoid of all Dharma, even a Kaula merits hell by concealment of the Kula-dharma (203).

I have spoken of the Bhairavi-cakra, which is the sole means of attaining enjoyment and final Liberation. I will now speak to Thee, O Queen of the Kaulas! of the Tattva circle. Do Thou listen (204).

The Tattva cakra is the king of all Cakras. It is also called the Divine Circle. Śādhatkas who have not attained

O Great Queen! there is no distinction of caste in the Brahma Circle, nor rule as to place or time or cup. The foolish men who in their ignorance, make distinctions of birth or caste when seated in the Divya-cakra go upon the downward path. And therefore should those excellent worshippers, possessed of the Knowledge that the Supreme Brahman pervades all things, perform the rites of the Tattva Circle with every care for the attainment of religious merit, fulfilment of desire, wealth, and Liberation.

Śrī Devī said:

Lord! Thou hast spoken in full of the duties of the householder; it now behoves Thee kindly to speak of the duties appropriate to the ascetic life.

Śrī Śādā-śīva said:

Devī! the stage of life of an Avadhūta is in the Kali Age called Saṁnyāsa. Now listen while I tell Thee what should be done.

When a man who is versed in Spiritual Wisdom acquires Brahman knowledge, and distaste for all Karma he should seek refuge in the life of an ascetic. If, however, one abandons an old mother or father, infant children and a devoted wife, or helpless dependents, and adopts the life of a wandering mendicant, one goes to Hell. All, whether Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya, Śūdra, or Sāmānya, are equally entitled to take part in the purificatory ceremony of the Kula ascetic.

After the performance of all the duties of a householder, and after satisfying all dependants and others, one should go forth from his house, indifferent, free from desires, with all his senses conquered. He who wishes thus to leave his house should call together his kinsmen and friends, his neighbours and men of his village, and lovingly ask of them their permission. Having obtained it, and made obeisance to his Iṣṭa-devatā, he should go round his village, and then without attachment, set forth from his house. Liberated from the bonds of household life, and immersed in exceeding joy, he should approach a Kula ascetic of divine knowledge, and pray to him as follows:

O Supreme Brahman! all this life of mine has been spent in the discharge of household duties. Do Thou, O Lord! be gracious to me in this my adoption of the life of an ascetic.

The religious Preceptor should thereupon satisfy himself that the disciple's duties as a householder have all been accomplished, and, on finding him to be of calm mind and full of discernment, initiate him into the second stage. The disciple should then, with a well-controlled mind, make his ablutions and say his daily prayer, and then, with the object of being absolved from the threefold debt due to them, worship the Devas, the Rṣis, and the Pitṛs.

By the Devas are meant Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Rudra, with their followers; by the Rṣis are meant Sanaka and others, as also the Devarṣis and the Brahmarṣis (233). Listen whilst I now enumerate the Ancestors who should be worshipped (234). The father, paternal grandfather, paternal great-grandfather, mother, the maternal grandfather, and others in the ascending line, and the maternal grandmother and others in the ascending line (235). At the time of adoption of the life of an ascetic, the Devas and Rṣis should be worshipped in the East, the paternal ancestors in the South, and the maternal ancestors in the West (236).

2. The threefold debt is that due to the Devas, Rṣis, and Pitṛs for protection, teaching, parentage; the fourth debt (Manava) is that to men for their help. The first is discharged by Yajña, the second by Brahmacārya, the third by giving birth to children, and the fourth by the performance of the duties of the Āśrama.
3. Rṣi according to some comes from that root Dṛṣ = to see for they are seers. Vācaspatya derives it from root Rṣ = to go, that is, one who has gone to the end of Sāṁśāra by Jñāna is a Rṣi. Bhārati classifies them as follows: the highest are the Mānasaputras of Brahmā who are Sanaka, Sanandana, Sanātana and others. The second class are the Devarṣis—Nārada and others. The third class are the Brahmarṣis Bhṛgu and others. Others give a different classification, Bhṛgu is there a Mānasaputra which is then the same as Brahmarṣi. Another class of Rṣis is the Kings who are Rṣis (Rājärṣi).
4. Bhārati says that "their followers" should be "his", that is, Rudra's followers.
5. Pitṛs.

Spreading two seats on each of these sides, beginning from the East, and invoking the Devas and others thereto, they should therebe worshipped (237). Having worshipped them in proper form, Piṇḍas should be offered to each of them separately according to the rules relating thereto. And then, with folded palms, let the disciple thus supplicate the Devas and Ancestors (238):

Mantra

O Fathers! O Devas! O Rṣis! O Mothers! be you satisfied. Do you absolve me, about to enter upon the path of Renunciation from all debts (239).

Having thus prayed to be free from all debts, bowing again and again, and being thus freed of all debts, he should perform his own funeral rites (240). The father and paternal grandfather and great-grandfather are one's Self. In offering, therefore, the individual Self to the Supreme Spirit, he who is wise should perform his own funeral rites (241). O Devi! sitting with his face to the North, and invoking the spirits of his ancestors upon the seats which he has prepared for them, he should, after doing them homage, offer the funeral cakes (242). In so offering he should spread Kuṣa grass with the ends towards the East,

South,² West,¹ and towards the North for himself³ (243). After completion, according to the directions of the Guru, of the funeral rites, the seeker after Liberation should, in order to purify his heart inwardly, recite the following Mantra a hundred times (244):

MANTRA

Hriṁ, Let us worship Tryāmbaka ⁴, sweet-scented increaser of nourishment. May He free us from the bond of death just as the Urvārūka ⁵ is freed of its stalk. May He not cast us away from immortality (245).

Then the religious Preceptor ⁶ should draw a Maṇḍala ⁷ on the altar of a shape in accordance with the form of worship of the Iṣṭa-devatā of the Śādha,⁸ and then place the jar on the altar and commence worship (246). Then the Guru, possessed of Brahma knowledge, should meditate upon and worship the Supreme Spirit in the manner prescribed by Śāmbhu, and place fire on the altar (247). The Guru should then offer unto the fire so sanctified the oblation according to his own Kalpa,⁹ and then make his disciple perform the complete Homa ¹⁰ (248). He should first offer oblation with ¹⁰ Sākala-Homa—the universal oblation or sacrifice to Fire.

Considering his body as dead and devoid of all function, and calling to mind the Supreme Brahman, let him take off his sacred thread (256). He, the knower of the Tattva, should take it from his shoulder, uttering the

Mantra

Aīm Kliṃ Hamsāḥ

Holding it in his hand while he recites the three Vyāhṛtis, ending with Svāha, let him throw it steeped in ghee into the fire (257). Having thus offered the sacred thread as an oblation to the fire, he should, whilst uttering the Kāma-Bija, cut off his crown-lock and take and place it in the ghee (258) [with the]

Mantra

O Crown Lock! Daughter of Brahman! thou art an ascetic in the form of hair. I am now giving thee a place in the Purifying One. Depart, O Devī! I make obeisance to thee (259).

He should then, whilst uttering the Kāma, Māyā, Kūrca, and Astra Bijas, ending with the Mantra Svāhā, make the Homa sacrifice of that lock of hair in the sanctified fire (260). The Piṭrs, Devas, and Devarṣis, as also all acts performed in the worldly stage of life, reside in that lock and have it as their support (261). Therefore the man who renounces the crown-lock and sacred thread after the performance of the oblation becomes one with Brahman (262). The twice-born enter the stage of an ascetic by renunciation of the crown-lock and sacred thread, and the Śūdras and Śāmānyas by the renunciation of the crown-lock only (263). Then he whose crown-lock and sacred thread have been thus removed should make obeisance to the Guru, laying himself full length upon the ground. The Guru should then raise his disciple and say into his right ear: “O wise one! Thou art That. Think within thyself ‘I am He’ & ‘He is I’. Free from all attachments and sense of Self, do thou go as thou pleasest as moved thereto by thy nature” (264-265).

The Guru, knower of the Brahman, should then, after removal of the jar and the fire, bend his head in obeisance to the disciple, recognizing in him, his own very Self, and say:

1. The seven Lokas which are the seven limbs of Prāṇava are collectively called Mahā-vyāhṛti. Homa with the first three is called Vyāhṛti Homa. The seven Lokas are: Bhūḥ, Bhūvah, Svāḥ, Mahāḥ, Jana, Tapas, Satya. They have their places in the human body. (See A. Avalon’s Serpent Power.)
2. Kliṃ.

6. Tat tvam asi, the Mahā-vākya or Great Word of the Upaniṣads.
7. Hamsāḥ: Ahāṃ+Saḥ, the A being deleted.
8. So’haṁ is Hamsāḥ reversed.

12. Atma-svarūpa, which may also mean Brahman, which is the same thing.
"O Thou whose form is this Universe! 1 I bow to Thee and to Myself. To Thee and Me I bow again and again. Thou art 'That' and 'That' is Thou. Again I bow to Thee." (267).

The worshippers of the Brahma-Mantra, who know the Tattva and have conquered themselves, attain the stage of an ascetic by cutting off the crown-lock with their own Mantra 2 (268). What need is there of sacrificial 3 or funeral 4 rites or ritual worship 4 for those purified by divine knowledge. 5 For those, who act as they please, there is no fault 6 (269). The disciple, devoid of all contraries, 7 of tranquil mind because desireless, may, as he pleases, roam the earth, the visible image of Brahman (270). He will think of everything, from Brahmā to a blade of grass, as the form of the Brahman, 8 and, meditating upon the Supreme in himself, will forget all name and form (271). Homeless, merciful, fearless, devoid of attachment, claiming nothing as his own, devoid of egoism, the ascetic will move about the earth (272). He is free of all injunctions and prohibitions. He shall not strive to attain what he has not, nor to protect what he has. He knows himself. He is equally unaffected by either joy or sorrow. He is calm, the conqueror of himself, and free from all desires (273). His soul is untroubled even in sorrow, desireless even in prosperity. He is ever joyful, pure, calm, independent unper­turbed. He will hurt no living thing, but will be ever devoted to the good of all beings. He is free from anger and fear, with his senses under control and without desire. He strives not for the preservation of his body. He is not obsessed by any longing (274-275). He will be free from grief and resentment, equal to friend and foe, patient in the endurance of cold and heat, and to him both honour and disgrace are one and the same (276). He is the same in good or evil fortune, pleased with whatsoever, without effort, he may obtain. 1 He is beyond the three attributes, 2 and ignorance, 3 free of covetousness, and (wealth) he will hoard not 4 (277). He will be happy in the knowledge that, as the unreal universe, which is not Sat, has its support in Sat or the Truth, 5 so the body has the Spirit as its support (278). He attains Liberation by the realization that the Spirit is completely detached from the organs of sense which function each its own way, and is the witness of that which is done 6 (279).

The ascetic should not touch any metal, and should avoid calumny, untruth, jealousy, all dallying with woman, and all discharge of seed (280). He should regard with an equal eye worms, men, and Devas. The ascetic wanderer should know that Brahman is in everything that is done (281). He should eat without making any distinction as to the fitness of place, time, or person, food whether it comes from a Vipra or Cândâla, or from any other source or person whatsoever (282). The ascetic, though passing his time as he pleases, should study the Scriptures relating to the Self and in meditation upon the nature of That (283). The corpse of an ascetic should on no account be cremated. It should be worshipped with scents and flowers, and then either buried or sunk into water (284). O Devi! the inclination of those men who have not attained union with the Supreme Spirit, and who ever seek after enjoyment, is by nature turned towards the path of action (285).

They remain attached to the practice of meditation, ritual worship, and recitation. Let them who are strong in their faith therein know that to be the best for them (286). It is on account of them that I have spoken of various rites for the purification of the heart, and have with the same object of the Chândogya-Upanisad). And so, according to the Vedânta—Ātmâ sākṣi ceta kevalo nirgunaśca—"the Spirit is the one, intelligent, attributeless witness," and to its permanency is due, to use Kantian phraseology, the cause of "the synthetic unity of apperception ".

devised many names and forms (287). O Devi! without knowledge of the Brahman and the abandonment of all action, man cannot attain Liberation, even though he performed countless such acts of worship (288). The householder should consider the Kula ascetic, possessed of divine knowledge, to be the visible Nârâyâna in the form of man, and should worship Him as such (289). By the mere sight of one who has subdued his passions a man is freed of all his sins, and earns that merit which he obtains by journeying to places of pilgrimage, the giving of alms, and the performance of all vows, penances, and sacrifices (290).
